"When winter comes, ice can't be far behind" was the wise crack some stuffed mattress made when he saw the boys and girls doing slides, glides and bumps on the ice.

It seems that the season, the ice and the snow, sort of stimulates the desire to be playful and develish in all nature's creatures. In our story elephants are playing see-saw with little mice. Develish little cats are stealing perfectly good bath tubs and using them to slide down the hill. It isn't always that these stunts work out for eventually the tub spills and piles the lil' cats up in the deep white snow.

Just two miles east a flock of darn fool cats, cook up a scheme to have some fun with Lizzie Hippo, they fit her out with skies and shove her along to the edge of the cliff where all of the ski jumpers slide down. Lizzie has no pther choice for once she's started she has to go thru with it, and in fact Lizzie doesn't do so bad considering all the tricks of the game, until of course, when it comes to the sharp spot in the air and when landing Lizzie just naturally goes right thru the ground. However Alpine Al is right there with his trained giraffe and cranes her up out of the deep pit, but somehow just as every thing is working out right, then is when it had to go wrong, and Al's Crane Hippo and all tumble over into the pit. This makes both the Hippo and the giraffe sore as old thunder, so then it's Al's turn to head straight for the alp, just two jumps ahead of his persuers, Al seems to get away O.K. but it's only half an hour later, that a flock of develish bears shove him sceduled for more trouble. They shove him over the cliff and right when he's sliding good six or seven of them jump up on him using him as a sled. Down at the bottom of the cliff Al and his crowd bump right thru the ice, the splash throws out a flock of fish and later the whole six bears, then Al appears. No sooner has he reached the air until he is lassoed by some other animals and dragged away over the ice

Old Al seems to think that :-"Ice is not always what it is cracked up to be"
